About The Mayfair Townhouse

Opened in December 2020, The Mayfair Townhouse is the fifth British hotel from Iconic Luxury Hotels. Located on Half Moon Street alongside Piccadilly, The Mayfair Townhouse is a collection of 15 Georgian townhouses, seven of which are listed buildings. Home to 172 rooms and suites, each accommodation type offers a different narrative derived from the spirit of the 'Dandy' era. There are a variety of different Room types, a collection of modern Suites (some with their own private patio) and three Signature Suites that mimic the luxury lifestyle that Mayfair is known for, while providing incredible views overlooking London's vibrant West End. The heart and soul of the Townhouse is The Dandy Bar, a flamboyant yet sophisticated bar offering refuge from the bustling streets of Mayfair. The Lower Ground of the Townhouse consists of The Club Room (a non-traditional restaurant destination), The Den (a semi-private dining room that instils the feeling of belonging to the residence's owner) and Oscar's Study (a larger private dining/meeting room available for exclusive use).

Overseeing the design of the Grade-II listed hotel was acclaimed interior design firm Goddard Littlefair, who have tied the series of Georgian buildings together by creating a residential townhouse aesthetic throughout. Drawing inspiration from characters such as Oscar Wilde (Half Moon Street was the setting for Oscar Wilde's most famous play, The Importance of Being Earnest), and the flamboyant aesthetic movement of that period, the hotel showcases a contemporary British style with flamboyant, witty touches throughout. Twists of the unexpected, curiosities, and a humorous, playful design tone resonate throughout the hotel whilst maintaining the sense of a discreet Mayfair residency.

Mayfair Neighbourhood

The property's central location is in one of London's most fashionable neighbourhoods. The Townhouse offers a flamboyant backdrop to explore the cultural hub of London's trendy West End. Synonymous with status, heritage and prestige, Mayfair offers both old and new world exclusivity. On the corner of the property's location, you will find Piccadilly, where Fortnum & Mason, The Royal Academy of Arts and historic Burlington Arcade brush shoulders with Green Park and Hyde Park Corner. From there, venture further into the heart of the most expensive property on the Monopoly board into an enclave of fine dining, luxury shopping, world-class retailers, art galleries and museums.

History

The Mayfair Townhouse is steeped in rich history. The district of Mayfair has cemented itself as one of the world's most distinguished neighbourhoods - though, this esteemed setting was not always the case. Mayfair's humble beginning dates to before the Norman Conquest to Anglo-Saxon times. Through various bequeaths and following the Dissolution of the Monasteries, the 'The Hundred Acres' of pastureland that was eventually to become Mayfair passed in 1662 to Alexander Davies, who unluckily died from the Plague in 1665 leaving the bulk of this estate to his infant daughter Mary, who was eventually betrothed and married to the baronet, Sir Thomas Grosvenor.

In 1686 the decision was taken with the approval of King James II, to move the then annual 'May Fair' from its original home to a corner of the muddy field owned by Lady Mary Grosvenor, today known as 'Park Lane'. The annual May Fair continued to attract a sordid crowd and, to culturally improve the area in 1764 wealthy landowners commissioned property developer Edward Shepherd to design the area known today as 'Shepherd Market' as the new home of the May Fair.

By an Act of Parliament in 1711, Mary's land was then passed to the male line of the Grosvenor family and leases began to be granted to develop the vacant fields into an estate of "overriding architectural unity". Feverish levels of building followed, with royalty and aristocrats quickly snapped up residences in this now sought-after area and the dandy lifestyle that once thrived in Mayfair, is perfectly captured in our playful personality today.

The Mayfair Townhouse lines the illustrious Half Moon Street, named after the 'Half Moon Tavern' that once stood on the corner. Half Moon Street is the setting for Oscar Wilde's most famous play, The Importance of Being Earnest. Built from 1730 and completed by 1746, Half Moon Street was a colourful haunt for bachelors, bohemians, and artistic types in Victorian London. During this time, many of the street's townhouses were split into residential apartments for the elite to live before marriage. Iconic fictional characters such as Oscar Wilde's Algernon Moncrieff and Bertie Wooster's in P. G. Wodehouse's famous comedies resided here. These characters live on in the Townhouse today, through a quick-witted design and playful art collection.

Architecture & Design

The transformation and design of The Mayfair Townhouse was helmed by award-winning Interior design firm Goddard Littlefair. Drawing on design elements of the Dandy era and the property's Georgian architecture, The Mayfair Townhouse elegantly blends the rich history of the old, with the electricity of the new, to create an essence of 'Old Mayfair, Meets Mayfair.' Throughout the property there are nods to its past, from the period furniture to colour scheme to curated artwork that restores the Georgian spirit to the property in a modern and eclectic way.

The design delves into the personalities of the original inhabitants of the area, taking inspiration from characters like Wilde and his contemporary aesthetes, and the flamboyant aesthetic movement of that period. The result? A contemporary Georgian style interwoven with English eccentricities, capturing the adventurous mischief of the dandy. Twists of the unexpected, curiosities, and a humorous, playful design tone resonate throughout the hotel through various fabrics and colour palettes, to create a flamboyant dressing on the residential townhouse.

Art

Art plays a central part throughout the hotel with Minda Dowling, a leading art specialist, curating unique and unusual pieces for The Mayfair Townhouse to further bring the spaces to life. The carefully considered collection includes both well-known names and emerging artists. Standout artwork includes Clarita Brinkerhoff's peacock sculpture, sitting at 67 inches high and made from 25,000 Swarovski crystals. The fox, the hotel's mischievous motif, is woven throughout the hotel. For those wanting to learn more about the artwork, QR codes have been developed so guests can scan the code that will provide information on the piece.
